Teachers: Feedback Analysis Report Year 2023-24

Date: 12/07/2024

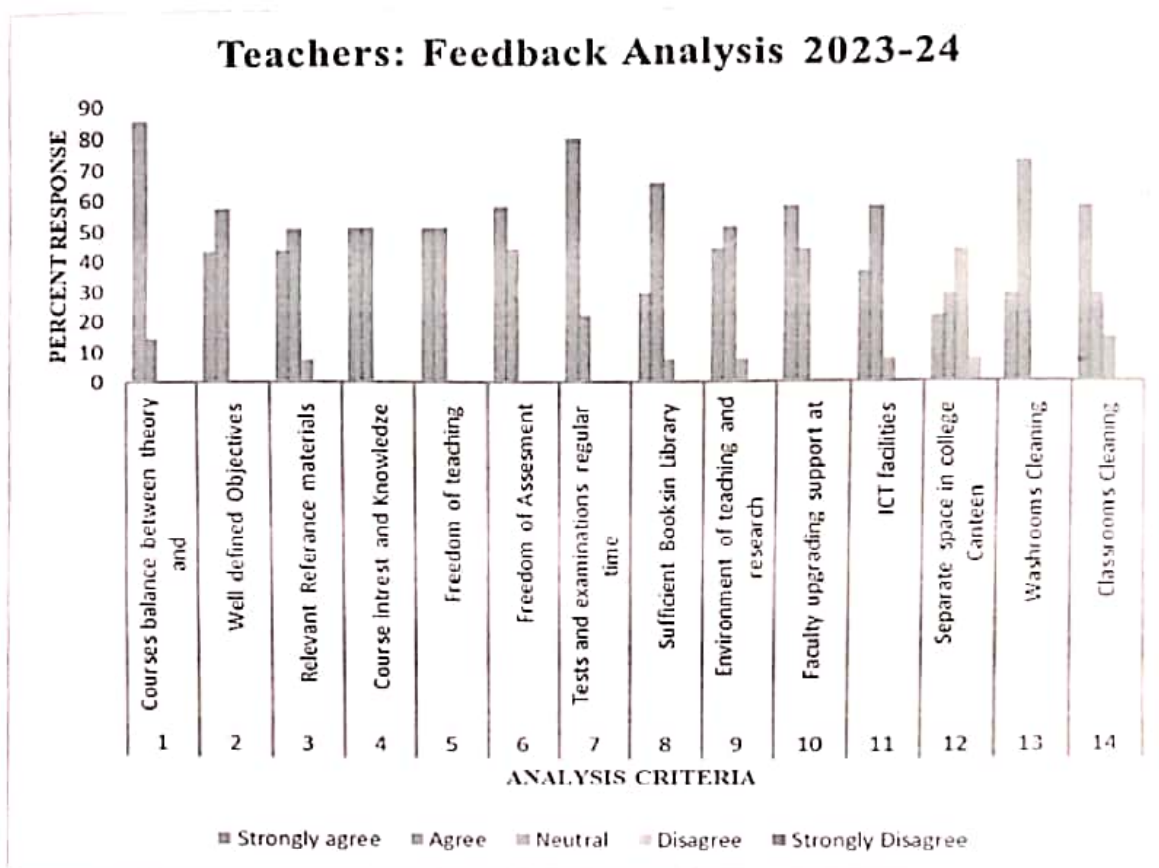

The feedback from stakeholders (teachers) for the academic year 2023-24 shows positive perspectives on the balance between theoretical and practical courses, aligning well with the course objectives. These factors indicate a well-structured curriculum that fosters effective teaching and learning experiences.

However, the feedback also highlights areas that warrant attention and improvement. While there is overall satisfaction with the availability of reference materials, there is room for enhancement, suggesting a need for continuous updates to align with the evolving curriculum according to New Education Policy 2020.

Furthermore, concerns about the freedom of teaching and assessment methods indicate an opportunity for more open and adaptable teaching approaches.

Teachers: Feedback Analysis 2023-24

On a positive note, the feedback underscores satisfactory aspects such as the timely scheduling of tests and examinations, sufficient books in the library, and a positive environment for teaching and research. Nevertheless, attention is needed in certain areas, including providing separate space in the college canteen and maintaining cleanliness in washrooms. Focusing on these particular aspects will help to create a more enriching and supportive environment for teaching and learning.
